

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

The present invention provides a transparent electrode structure for a plasma display panel. The transparent electrode structure has a body and two connecting parts. This body is connected to the branches of the comb electrode through the two connecting parts to make the body protrude toward the center of the luminant unit. A hollow exists between the transparent electrode and the main line of the comb electrode.